

Satyabrata Ghose v. Mugneeram Bangur & Co.

This is a third-party open dataset summary. The Supreme Court laid down the scope of the doctrine of frustration in Indian contract law, stating that 'impossible' does not merely mean physical or literal impossibility, but also impracticability from the point of view of the object and purpose of the parties.